South Carolina Farm Bureau Federation announces new license tag design promoting Agriculture

The South Carolina Farm Bureau Federation (SCFB) announced a new specialty license plate Monday that promotes agriculture with the slogan "Our Farms - Our Future." Proceeds from the sale of the tag will go to SCFB's Agriculture in the Classroom Fund to help sustain Farm Bureau's work to equip teachers with tools to teach South Carolina children the value of family farmers and the food, fiber, and fuel they produce.

FFA students donate flowers to beautify Capitol grounds

Hard work from FFA students from around the state is helping beautify South Carolina's Capitol grounds in Columbia.

Dozens of FFA students gathered on the north steps of the State House Wednesday, April 14, for the 10th annual plant presentation to the State of South Carolina. The flowers, grown by the FFA students at their schools across the state as part of their horticultural education classes will be used at several state office locations including the State Capitol Complex and DHEC on Bull Street to beautify the grounds.

Farming Protects our Way of Life

This is not a column about how farming instills and promotes the values that make our state and country special. It is to tell you about an unusual way your South Carolina National Guard is protecting us.

Farmers the world over face many of the same challenges. Too much rainfall, not enough. Too much heat or too much cold. But farmers here in South Carolina are fortunate they do not have to deal with the challenges faced by farmers in Afghanistan. Realizing agribusiness is the country's way into a prosperous future, the National Guard has launched Agribusiness Development Teams (ADT) to promote sustainable farming practices in Afghanistan.

For the next year, a team of around fifty soldiers from the South Carolina Army National Guard will call the rural Logar province of Afghanistan home. Their year will be a busy one teaching new techniques to the farmers. According to Sgt. Maj. Michael Hall, with the South Carolina Army National Guard, they are not there to introduce new crops, but rather to focus on new practices and technology.

"We recognize that this area and these people have been farming successfully here for thousands of years, but after decades of war and conflicts, it has destroyed much of their land and natural resources," Hall said.

The "Our Farms - Our Future" plate is among the first issued through the South Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles (SCDMV) digital "on demand" process, which means the plates are not available in SCDMV field offices. Instead, the plates will be printed and mailed as vehicle owners place orders.

The fee for the specialty "Our Farms - Our Future" plates is $70 every two years in addition to the regular motor vehicle registration fee. Interested customers may place their license plate orders by mail or at any SCDMV field office on form MV-95. Applications will be processed within three to five business days.

"I hope every vehicle owner will consider purchasing an 'Our Farms - Our Future' plate to help us promote the value of farmers and domestically grown food, fiber, and fuel to young people across the state," SCFB President David Winkles said.

For more information about how to obtain your mail-order license plate, call the SCDMV Call Center at 803-896-5000 or go on line www.scdmvonline.com to download order form MV-95.

FFA students

"The plants you see here are a result of education," said Billy Keels, State Director of FFA in South Carolina.

The annual project has four main objectives for the students involved. Those objectives are to beautify South Carolina, build civic responsibilities in FFA students, help citizens develop an appreciation for the FFA and to use resources wisely. The donated plants are being reused for the beautification project after used by students for teaching tools.

Dennis Haigler with the State's Budget and Control Board's Horticultural Services said he was appreciative of the students' hard work. The 400 flats of plants grown by FFA students and were displayed on the Capitol's steps before Haigler's crew took them to be planted.

East Meets West
Steak

- 2 beef shoulder center (ranch) steaks, cut 1 inch thick (about 8 ounces each)
- 3/4 cup prepared regular or reduced fat Asian-style dressing
- 1 package (1 pound) coleslaw mix
- 1 cup snow peas, trimmed, cut diagonally in half or 3/4 cup frozen shelled edamame, defrosted
- 1/4 cup honey-roasted peanuts, chopped or slivered almonds, toasted

Place beef steaks and 1/4 cup dressing in food-safe plastic bag; turn steaks to coat. Close bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 15 minutes to 2 hours.

Remove steaks from marinade; discard marinade. Place steaks on grid over medium, ash-covered coals. Grill, covered, 11 to 14 minutes (over medium heat on preheated gas grill, covered, 12 to 16 minutes) for medium rare (145°F) to medium (160°F) doneness, turning occasionally.

Carve steaks into thin slices; season with salt and pepper, as desired. Toss coleslaw mix, snow peas and peanuts with remaining 1/2 cup dressing in large bowl until well coated. Add beef; toss to combine. Makes 4 servings.

Logar Province, a rural area of high desert, has an annual precipitation of 10-12 inches Can't get much to grow with that amount of moisture. Snowfall in the winter is the major source of water for spring crops. Being able to help a village to develop and maintain a reliable source of water is a major concern.

Some of the current projects they are working on include improving existing water sources, building grape trellises, assisting in bee keeping training, establishing a soil testing system, reducing watershed erosion, drip irrigation, and construction of buildings for plant protection and animal health.

Afghanistan has a strong agricultural history and about 80 percent of their economy is tied to agriculture. At one time Afghanistan exported food to neighboring countries, but today the majority of the nation is poor with hand-to-mouth farming operations. Many of the farmers have fled or have been killed and talent has been lost forever.

The crops in Afghanistan are similar to what we grow here in South Carolina including cotton, corn, and melons. But the country is mostly known for its illegal poppy production that finds its way into illegal drug trade around the world. By teaching the Afghans more effective ways to grow local crops, the teams hope to discourage them from growing poppies for opium. In 2007, 93 percent of the world's opium was produced in Afghanistan, according to the U.S. State Department.

Prior to leaving for Afghanistan, the Ag team spent a week at Clemson University attending classes and seminars which were presented through the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Life Sciences. The topics covered a number of areas as well as small ruminants, poultry, cool and cold storage, and bee keeping.

South Carolina is not the first state to send people from the National Guard to take on this very important mission. The ADTs, which started out with one team from Missouri in 2007, have evolved to roughly a dozen dispersed throughout Afghanistan, said Col. Marty Leppert. Leppert oversees the program for the Army National Guard in Washington, D.C.

Since the program began in 2007, 18 separate ADT rotations have gone from states such as Texas, Indiana, Kansas, and Kentucky.

In addition to the training they received at Clemson, the team moved to Camp Atterbury, Indiana in September, where they received more intensive military training especially designed for Afghanistan and Agribusiness Development Teams. They certainly have to be safe and aware of the hostile environment. They then traveled to Purdue University where they were given additional small ruminant training conducted by the School of Veterinary Medicine.

Food crosses the language barrier, makes friends among people, and warms the heart. Guard officials hope the ADTs can continue to build trust among the Afghan people and, by helping develop the battle-scarred country, improve the fragile security situation there. And, by doing so, protect us at home.

They say 'give a man a fish and feed him for a day. Show a man how to fish and feed him for a lifetime.'

The Guard teams are showing the Afghans how to farm for a lifetime and for a country's future. We wish them all the best and they remain in our thoughts and prayers.

USDA Extends Sign-Up for Emergency Assistance to Eligible Producers of Livestock, Honeybees, and Farm-Raised Fish

Laurie C. Lawson U.S.D.A. Farm Service Agency, announced that it will accept applications for the Emergency Assistance for Livestock, Honeybees and Farm-Raised Fish Program (ELAP) for losses that took place in calendar years 2008 and 2009. ELAP sign-up ended on December 10, 2009, for 2008 losses and on February 1, 2010, for 2009 losses. However, because of changes to program eligibility provisions, the Farm Service Agency (FSA) is accepting late-filed applications for 2008 and 2009 livestock, honeybees, and/or farm-raised fish losses through May 5.

For more information or to apply for ELAP and other USDA Farm Service Agency disaster assistance programs, please visit your FSA county office or www.fsa.usda.gov.

Vegetable Production Field Day at Coastal REC

A Vegetable Production Field Day will be held on Tuesday, May 11, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Coastal Research and Education Center, 2865 Savannah Hwy., Charleston.

The Field Day will provide growers, county agents, and others in the produce industry an opportunity to observe the results of new techniques that are being used to grow vegetables. Topics will include: “High Tunnel Vegetable Production,” “Watermelon Gummy Stem Blight Fungicide Trial,” “Grafted Seedless Watermelon Control of Fusarium Wilt,” “Brassica Cover Crops (oilseed radish, winter rapeseed and mustard) for Biofumigation,” and “Grafted Tomato Trial Weed Control Using Selected Cover Crops.”

The Field Day registration includes dinner. Deadline to register is May 5th. For growers and agents planning to attend, contact Roger Francis, County Extension Agent, 843-722-5940.
